Dear Alcoa Customer/Partner,

We announced today that Alcoa has made a proposal to acquire Alcan to create a premier diversified aluminum company. We are very excited about the opportunities that will be created by this transaction. Attached you will find the press release that was issued this morning, which provides additional details on our offer.

Alcoa and Alcan already have a shared history and shared values, and together we will have a strong future. As you know, the industry landscape is changing. The combination of Alcoa and Alcan will create a company with the scale and cost structure necessary to remain competitive. This combined company will bring together a complementary portfolio of businesses and benefit from a broader talent base and enhanced growth opportunities.

The combined company's larger capital base and cash flow will enable us to better fund growth plans to respond to increasing global aluminum demand, as well as manage the risks of large scale investments. For our customers and partners, this means we will be ideally positioned to deliver the highest quality aluminum and end market products.

This transaction remains subject to review by competition and other authorities in a number of jurisdictions. We believe any issues can be solved through targeted divestitures and are working proactively with these regulators to address any potential concerns. However, it will be some time before this transaction is completed and we are targeting completion of the transaction by the end of 2007.

In the meantime, it will be business as usual at Alcoa and, as a valued customer and partner, you will see no change in how you do business with us. You can continue to expect the high level of service and quality from Alcoa to which you are accustomed.

On behalf of the entire Alcoa organization, I want to thank you for your continued support. We value our partnership and look forward to continuing our relationship with you.

Sincerely,

Alain J. P. Belda

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Alcoa
